67 ANGLESEA ROAD, BALLSBRIDGE, DUBLIN 4

DESCRIPTION

A beautifully proportioned and meticulously refurbished and extended four storey red brick Edwardian residence with five bedrooms and three en suites. Built c.1903 on one of Dublin 4's more sought after residential roads.

Number 67 has undergone a stunning transformation set behind electronic gates it is a wonderful example of an effortless blend of classic period style and elegance with the last word in modern convenience and cutting edge living. The property is beautifully presented with neutral tones throughout including creams, mushroom and taupe's by Farrow and Ball.

Of particular note is the kitchen/breakfast room with its excellent range of in-frame fitted Oakline kitchen with granite counter tops and feature six ring Britannia gas hob and oven.

The property benefits from private walled sunny west facing rear gardens which have been carefully designed and professionally landscaped. There is side access leading to ample secure parking to the front. Combine these elements with the best available quality finish of fixtures and fittings throughout makes this property one of the highest pedigree family homes in the area and an opportunity not to be missed.

Only a short stroll of the extensive amenities provided by Ballsbridge, Donnybrook and the city centre. Some of the excellent amenities include local shops, many of Dublin's top hotels and restaurants including the Dylan Hotel, Marcel's restaurant, Roly's and the Four Seasons Hotel. Recreational facilities are also well catered for with Herbert Park, Lansdowne football stadium, and the RDS showground's close by. There is an excellent choice of primary and secondary schools nearby. All of this combines to provide a perfect family/town residence ready to move right into in the ideal location.
