HPI certification

IGBC Home Performance Index (HPI) Certification provides a label for quality sustainable residential development, complementing existing schemes used in the commercial sector such as BREEAM and LEED. HPI provides a high level of transparency with respect to ESG criteria driving lower investment risk. HPI is aligning with the EU Taxonomy, considered important for investors and tailored to the Irish residential sector, with worldwide recognition by GRESB, the WELL building institute and a 5-star rating from the European Commission for good practice and transferability

In summary HPI offers

1. Superior building quality
2. Cheaper to run and healthier homes
3. Alignment with the EU Taxonomy
4. Reduced mortgage default risk
5. Opportunity to issue green bonds
6. Alignment with increasing financial regulatory requirements on climate-risk
7. Reputational benefits

For the homeowner HPI provides home buyers with the assurance that their homes have been designed and constructed with greater care to ensure low running costs, enhance occupant wellbeing and environmental impact is minimised. The HPI certification is based on 54 verifiable indicators that are divided into five categories: Environment, Economic, Health and Wellbeing, Quality Assurance and Sustainable Location. It allows several levels of achievement based on good, better and best practice. The award of a certificate is based on the overall attainment across all categories. The design team is encouraged to work from a very early stage to achieve targets. They provide the evidence requested for each of the indicators. This is then audited for compliance and if successful, certification can be awarded for either Certified @ 45% or Gold @ 65% achieved.

Dun Oir will achieve HPI Certified

Registered under HPI

Home Performance Index Certification is Ireland's national certification for new homes. Similar to certification for commercial development like LEED and BREEAM, except that it's specifically designed for residential development and aligns to Irish building regulations, EU CEN standards and international WELL certification for communities.

The certification was awarded 5 out of 5 for best practice and transparency by the European Construction Sector Observatory.

The Home Performance Index stamp of approval provides a robust and nationally tailored green home label, that is aligned with the EU Sustainable Finance Taxonomy and also with Level(s), the new EU sustainable buildings assessment and reporting framework. It is a readymade solution for finance providers seeking third party assurance that eligibility criteria for new "green" homes are met.
