LOCATION

The Brunel Building occupies a prominent position on Military Road in St James, an established and rapidly evolving business district on the western edge of Dublin city centre.

This location offers an excellent balance between the traditional CBD and the wider city, with strong connectivity to Dublin 2, the Docklands and key arterial routes.

Occupiers benefit from close proximity to major employment hubs including Heuston Gateway, Parkgate Street and the city centre core, alongside a wide mix of public and private sector organisations. Several high profile hospitals, such as St James Hospital, The Royal Hospital and the New Children's Hospital, are located nearby, as well as Garda Síochána's HQ.

Heuston Station and the LUAS Red Line are within easy walking distance, providing seamless access across the city and nationally, while numerous Dublin Bus routes serve the area.

The building is also well supported by a growing range of local amenities. The surrounding areas of St James's, Kilmainham and Parkgate Street offer a variety of cafés, restaurants, hotels and everyday services, while nearby amenities such as the Phoenix Park, Irish Museum of Modern Art and the River Liffey corridor provide valuable recreational and wellbeing opportunities. This combination of accessibility, amenity and character makes the Brunel Building a highly attractive and well-connected city location for modern occupiers.

THE BUILDING

The Brunel Building, with its sweeping curved glass façade, is a one in a kind opportunity, commanding a pivotal profile onto Grand Central Square within the scheme and stunning views to The Royal Hospital, Kilmainham Gardens, Heuston Station, River Liffey and Phoenix Park. Extending to eleven storeys over basement, the building combines distinctive architectural character with bright, efficient floor plates.

The available 9th, 10th & 11th floors, the three most upper floors of the building, provide efficient and highly flexible floorplates suited to modern occupier requirements. The combined three floors have access to terraces on each floor and an extensive private balcony on the 10th, which provides unmatched 360° degree views of Dublin and the surrounding area. These floors provide a professional penthouse feel, with convenient access to the city centre.
