This 1930's home sits well back from the road at the top of a sweeping tarmacadam driveway. It is framed by rhododendrons, apple trees and mature hedging, and its twin bay windows and red hall door look out over the lawns. It is a classic double-fronted family home with real character, 600m from the village of Newtowncunningham and within easy reach of both Letterkenny and Derry.

The period details are still here: high ceilings of 2.74m throughout the ground floor, ceiling cornicing, picture rails, the original tiled porch floor, internal doors and a feature 15-pane glazed inner door. There are three reception rooms in all. The two bay-fronted front rooms are both dual aspect, with solid hardwood floors and open fireplaces. They are bright, generous rooms, filled with morning light from the south-east and well suited to long winter evenings by the fire. The third is the kitchen, which has its oil-fired Stanley range, the heart of the house, and also runs the central heating. It is supported by a separate utility room with pantry style storage and a cold room with a porthole-style window. There is the benefit of a ground-floor wet room with stand out red tiles.

A large arched window at the half landing looks over the rear garden towards open countryside. Upstairs there are four bedrooms, all well proportioned with good ceiling heights. One of them works well as a home office. The first bedroom has a built-in wardrobe that backs onto the separate WC, giving scope to create an en-suite. A family bathroom with floor-to-ceiling storage cupboards and the separate WC complete the first floor. The attic is floored for storage and reached by a Stira-type folding stairs.
