Property Details

History

Bundorragha Cottage is believed to have been originally constructed by The Congested Districts Board in the early 1800's, served as a central gathering place for nearly 80 cottages in this pre-famine hamlet. Under the ownership of Pat O'Grady, the cottage later become a formal Shebeen where Irish music and dance sessions were held regularly. The bar, situated in the present-day sitting room, consisted of two wooden planks on top of wooden fish barrels, adjacent to the main bedroom which served as a ladies pre-dancing beautification room.

The locals still fondly reminisce about the lively Ceilidh nights at Pat's Sheebeen, especially the sight of Pat rowing his curradh (rowing boat) across Killary Bay under the moonlight. His mission was to replenish his bar from the legally licensed Public House at Nancy's Point before his customers ran out of provisions.
